

Almost Two-Thirds of US Travelers Said They Plan to Book a Leisure Trip in the Next Six Months

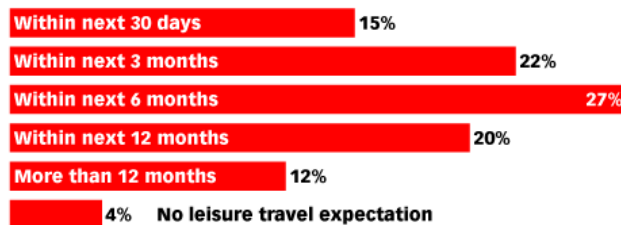

ARTICLE

Alicia Phaneuf

As lockdown restrictions in some parts of the US begin to lift, restless travelers are planning their next get-away. According to July 2020 data from MMGY Global, 64% of US travelers said they expect to book their next leisure trip within the next six months or less.

Coronavirus Impact: When Do US Travelers Expect to Book Their Next Leisure Trip?

% of respondents, July 2020

Note: ages 18+

Source: MMGY Global, "Travel Intentions Pulse Survey (TIPS): Impact of COVID-19 Wave IV," July 16, 2020

257145

www.eMarketer.com

Some travelers seem more wary due to the recent rise in coronavirus cases and travel restrictions in parts of the country. Just 16% of US travelers expect to book their next trip more than a year from now.

Read More:

Ad revenues for AVOD streaming platforms grew by nearly a third in Q2

US retail's recovery is losing speed as coronavirus cases rise and complicate reopening plans

How advertisers could manage their TV ad commitments amid the cancellation of college sports

eMarketer and Business Insider Intelligence have joined forces to become the leading research company focused on digital transformation. For more insights and key statistics on the biggest trends in today's most disruptive industries, subscribe to Chart of the Day.