

Some working parents are homesick—sick of home, that is

Article

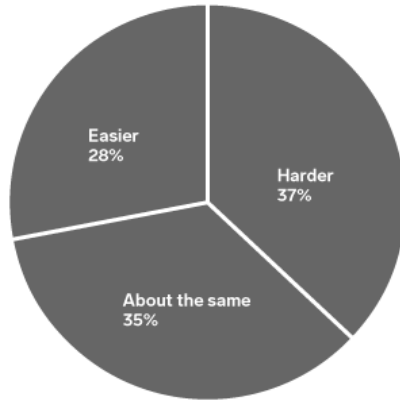

For more insights and key statistics on the biggest trends in today's most disruptive industries, subscribe to our Chart of the Day newsletter.

It takes a village to raise a child, but many parents stuck at home during the pandemic may not have access to their local child-raising village. The majority of US teleworking parents say balancing their full-time job with the full-time job of parenting is harder now than when their kids were schooled from school.

Is Balancing Work and Parenting Responsibilities Harder Than Before the Coronavirus Pandemic for US Teleworking Parents?

% of respondents; Oct 2020

Note: parents working from home all or most of the time; with children under 18
Source: Pew Research Center as cited in company blog, Jan 25, 2021

263349

eMarketer | InsiderIntelligence.com

More like this:

- The Weekly Listen: A reimagined workplace, digital transformation at The New York Times, and podcasts tap into consumers
- The Rise of Virtual Business Events: Best Practices for 2021 and a Look at a Hybrid Future
- Adjusting to a new (distributed) way of working